Nancy Seligson's Bio (2025)

Nancy Seligson was the emcee at the 40th Anniversary Celebration of the Long Island Sound Partnership on June 20, 2025.

Nancy Seligson has been a leader in Long Island Sound advocacy for over 30 years. Ms. Seligson is currently the New York Co-chair of the Long Island Sound Partnership Citizens Advisory Committee. She also co-chairs the Westchester Coalition for Clean Water. She is the past co-chair of the energy-focused nonprofit Sustainable Westchester, past president and board member of the nonprofit organization Save the Sound and is past chair of the Larchmont/Mamaroneck Coastal Zone Management Commission, the Westchester County Environmental Management Council, and the Westchester Chapter of the League of Conservation Voters.

Ms. Seligson was the Mamaroneck Town Supervisor for ten years beginning in 2011 and was a Councilwoman on the Town Board for the prior twelve years. She brought her interest in the environment to Town initiatives. She is also a past member of the Westchester County Board of Health.

Nancy studied and worked with Pace University's Land Use Law Center's Community Leadership Alliance programs teaching local leaders about New York State land-use law and facilitation techniques to improve municipal communications, efficiency, and cooperation. Ms. Seligson moved to the Larchmont/Mamaroneck community in 1998. She lives with her husband John Feingold and has a son and two stepdaughters. She graduated from Northwestern University with a degree in economics.
